The English Consul Annex district is bounded by the Highland Village Townhomes to the south, Annapolis Road - MD 648 to the east, Arbutus Avenue to the north, and the B/W Parkway - MD 295 to the west. It includes resources on Myrtle, Tulip, Daisy, Century, and Arbutus Avenues, and is almost exclusively residential in character.

The Annex was platted at the turn of the 20th century from the larger English Consul lands to the east. English Consul Annex, like neighboring residential neighborhoods in Baltimore Highlands and English Consul Estates, was slow to develop. Significant construction and development boomed in the post World War II years, when this area became one of many automobile suburbs to Baltimore. A comparison of aerial photographs from 1943 and 1953 show a marked increase in new home construction in the 10 year period.

Typical resources in the district include single family homes on small lots, some with detached garages and other ancillary structures, such as sheds and carports. The resources range in construction type and style, from single-story, front gable bungalows to two-story foursquare homes to modern manufactured modulars and duplexes.

Although many of the residences in this area surpass the 50 year age requirement for eligibility consideration, they lack sufficient significance to be considered eligible. As representative property types from the early 20th century, this neighborhood lacks the requisite architectural integrity and neighborhood cohesion to serve as an outstanding example of the evolution of suburban development around Baltimore. Of all the properties in this district that do not meet the 50 year requirement, none displayed any outstanding characteristics to be considered otherwise eligible for the National Register.
